Serving the Bible-believing Christians of the World

May/June 14

What's Wrong with this Picture?

The world watched in awe, Sunday, April 27, 2014: 800,000 people, 6,000 priests, 700 bishops, 150 cardinals, 24 heads of state and 93 official government delegations, two dead popes and two live ones, plus a paralyzed city! All of this preparation was focused on a single statement: "We declare and define Blessed John XXIII and John Paul II be saints and we enroll them among the saints, decreeing that they are to be venerated as such by the whole church." Thunderous applause erupted upon the pronouncement.

World news outlets served up course after course of infinite details of the pomp of this momentous gathering.

So what did it mean?

First off, the massive PR campaign over half a century has paid off handsomely for the Vatican. Two

During canonization, Pope Francis kissed the reliquaries containing a vial of blood of John Paul II and a skin fleck of John XXIII.

‘Comfortable Christianity... —Is Over!’

"The days of comfortable Christianity in the United States are over!" So states Princeton University Professor, Robert P. George in an interview with the Southern Baptist Ethics and Public Policy Center. He likens the situation to Christ's command to "take up your cross and follow me." In many parts of the world that cross can literally mean physical death. The number of martyrs for Christ, world wide, has doubled in the last four years.

But Professor George is speaking primarily of changing conditions in America. Like the rich young ruler who "went away sorrowful," many "...will not be willing to place at risk reputation, social standing, professional opportunities, and

The Snowball From Hell

By Mark Michie

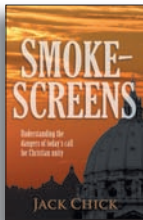

The Ecumenical Movement is accelerating like a snowball rolling down a mountainside. Many Evangelical churches and denominations are becoming part of that snowball, but it hasn't happened overnight.

One current example is what is happening in the Christian and Missionary Alliance in Canada (C&MA) and Ambrose University College and Seminary, operated jointly with the Church of the Nazarene, Canada. The college educates the next generation of pastors, church workers and missionaries in several Evangelical denominations.

Twenty-five years ago I attended C&MA churches. They preached the gospel and emphasized missions. They practised the Great Commission and believed that the lost were destined for eternal damnation.

March 4-8, 2014 was Global Impact Week at Ambrose, a week typically designated to emphasize missions, but this year, dedicated to the ecumenical "mission." The title of the conference was "Catholics and Evangelicals in God's Mission —Together."

The speakers were Gordon Smith and Tom Ryan. Smith, President of Ambrose, grew up as a missionary kid and was himself a missionary in the Philippines. Ryan, a Roman Catholic priest, is Director of the Paulist Office for Ecumenical and Interfaith Relations in Washington, DC and former Director for the Canadian Centre for Ecumenism.

The conference included five presentations by Smith and Ryan. Some differences between Roman Catholicism and Evangelical Christianity were noted —mostly by Catholic Tom Ryan, but the importance of these differences was strongly downplayed by "Evangelical" representative Gordon Smith. Smith's opening presentation promoted the unity of what he sees as "the Church" bound together by a "common faith" in a trinitarian God.

Tom Ryan gave a description of the gospel in one of his presentations, and contrasted it with the Catholic view of salvation. In the end, the differences noted were seen as "insignificant" in comparison to the commonalities and the "gifts" that each "Christian Tradition" offers the others. Smith was critical of Evangelicals who evangelize Catholics. He clearly believes Catholicism is true Christianity.

During the days surrounding the conference I contacted some people within the C&MA denomination —friends, acquaintances, and the head office in Toronto. I wanted to know how big this ecumenical snowball had gotten within the C&MA. In these conversations I expressed my deep concern for the students at Ambrose who would be deceived into believing that Romanism is true Christianity and that differences between Catholic and Christian gospels were of no consequence. I also expressed my dismay that Gordon Smith, President of Ambrose, got his PhD from a Jesuit seminary in Manila.

My first call was to the Canadian C&MA head office where David Freeman, VP of Canadian Ministries made it clear that he supported both the theme of the conference and Gordon Smith. He was convinced that Catholics are Christians and suggested I attend a Mass sometime.

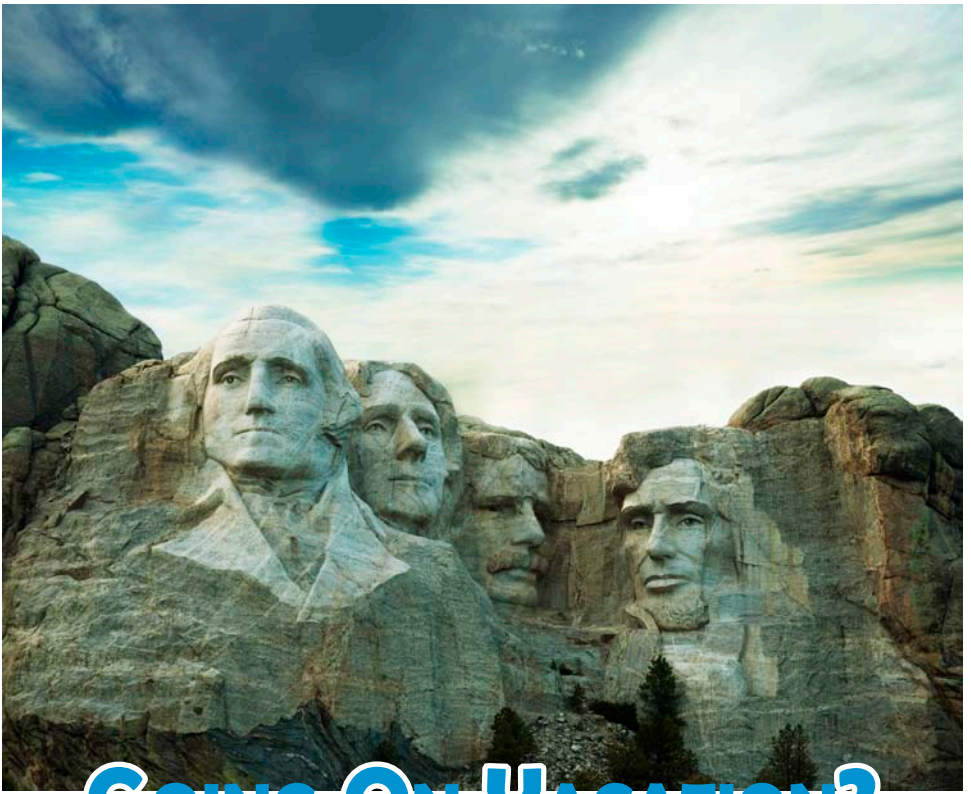

My second call was to a local C&MA pastor, non-committal and indifferent. A

Do You Really Believe God?

By David W. Daniels

People say, "I think God created the universe in billions of years. But He could have done it in six milliseconds."

If God told you He did it in six milliseconds, would you believe Him?

Yes? Well... He told you He did it in six days! Why then do you not believe Him?

See, it's not a matter of God saying what He did. He already told us that.

It's a matter of whether it SEEMS good to us!

Is that a good basis for faith? What we think should be the truth?

Or is it what God actually said that is the truth?

Listen to these words from a famous father of the modern Bible translation movement:

"...The fact that whales were actually mammals that had become aquatic millions of years ago seemed astounding, and the realization that dinosaurs once dominated the earth and left fossils of their bones and eggs seemed almost incredible, but obviously true. Even more amazing was the existence of millions of galaxies hundreds of light-years across.

"The Scientific American (my favorite magazine), and the accounts in Genesis 1 and 2 made sense only as two quite different ways of understanding texts: literally and figuratively. But in Genesis 6, the Bible also says that God himself was sorry for having created people. This I could readily believe because truly good people seem to be so scarce."

So he was prepared to believe in God being sorry for creating people, because of what he experienced. But he wouldn't believe that same God when He told him anything that disagreed with his opinions!

Who was that man?

Eugene Nida, the father of the modern Bible translation movement. And if you think that's not important, let me tell you the positions he held in his lifetime. He was:

- A founding organizer of the Summer Institute of Linguistics
- A founding member of Wycliffe Bible Translators
- Executive Translations Secretary of the American Bible Society
- A founding delegate of the United Bible Societies
- An adjunct professor at the Jesuit Pontifical Biblical Institute in Rome, and
- Almost every modern Bible and missionary Bible translation uses some form of the Bible translation strategies he championed.

Of the thousands of testimonies that have come into Chick Publications by phone, email and letter, the most heart-warming are the ones about suicide. Using the search term, "suicide," in the Chick Publications database of testimonies turns up the following:

A caller said that he was up in Michigan, at a crossroads in his life. He was in the middle of nowhere and decided to go into a restaurant.

He was thinking of committing suicide. He went into the bathroom and found a copy of the Chick tract, No Fear. He read it and recognized that the love of God was reaching out to him that day. That was a turning point in his life. He accepted the Lord.

the like, in order to bear witness and remain faithful to Christ.” Many Christians are already reeling under the accusations of “bigots,” and “homophobes.” One recent case that got wide attention in the Christian media was of Brendan Eich, co-founder and recently installed CEO of Mozilla, the producer of the popular Firefox web browser. Within a week of his election to CEO, news broke that he had contributed $1,000 to the California Marriage Proposition 8 campaign to protect marriage as between one man and one woman.

Accusations of “discrimination” were lodged against him and a boycott declared against Mozilla. Eich and the Mozilla corporate board soon “agreed” that it would be best if he stepped down. Professor George sees Christians being increasingly “discriminated” against in “... employment, licensing, accreditation of institutions, and government contracting. This is going to be rough sailing,” he predicts.

The tide is clearly turning against Bible believers. Recent court cases have begun to go against Christians in business who object to providing services such as wedding cakes and photography to same-sex weddings, and bed-and-breakfasts who refuse to allow same-sex couples to rent bedrooms. Other “Christian” businesses that have tried to hold to some kind of biblical standard have backed away from the fight.

In the broad scope of history, few have been privileged to live a “comfortable” Christianity. Right out of the box, Bible believers were attacked by the Jews and the Romans. They hid in rocks and caves while pagan “Christianity” flourished for over a thousand years, then came the Inquisition! For freedom’s sake, the pilgrims fled persecution in Europe and most of them died before a solid beachhead was planted in the New World.

Finally “comfortable,” we ignored the infiltration of godless humanism, so-called “scientific” evolution, legalized sin, sexual liberation, and lately, militant Islam. We declared government policy making (politics) too dirty for our concern and now will face anti-biblical laws and godless judges who ignore the First Amendment and push us further from public view.

Witnessing and soul winning are finding rising resistance. Christians in the Air Force Academy dared write scripture on their personal white board outside their dorm room and got slapped down for it. Christian ministries are listed as hate groups by the Southern Poverty Law Center, a think tank advising on government policy.

Jesus’ name is increasingly unwelcome in the official prayers of military and prison chaplains. Only prayers to a generic god who offends no one is preferred. This highlights another threat to soul winners: ecumenism, or the drive for Christian “unity.” Lost are the distinctions of who is a denomination and thus it is off limits for witnessing to cults such as Roman Catholicism and “main-line churches” that have abandoned basic biblical doctrines.

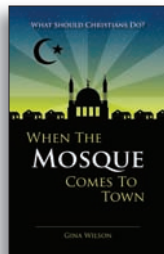

Professor George is probably right: the time is upon us when serving Christ will require counting the cost. If revival is still possible, wide saturation with no-nonsense gospel tracts will go a long way toward bringing it on.

“Recently I stopped at a sub shop for lunch and left a copy of Somebody Loves Me in my booth. On my way out, a worker called me back, waving the tract in her hand.

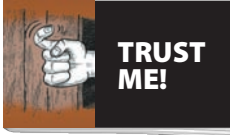

She asked me if it was mine and I told her that I had left it there to share the good news of Jesus.

Tears welled up in her eyes as she confessed to having thoughts of suicide. I motioned her to sit down and she prayed there with me to dedicate her life to Christ!”

“Just a testimony to let you know Chick tracts get results. I came across a girl named Carrie. She was very depressed and ready to commit suicide.

I had a copy of Trust Me which I gave to her and witnessed to her. She accepted the Lord and changed her mind about ending it all. Praise God!” —Anonymous “Years ago I was a practicing sodomite. I had 12 years of Catholic school and, although I was not active in the Roman Catholic Church, it was the source of everything I’d heard about Jesus. With this sort of foundation perhaps it should not have been surprising that I fell in with a group in college that encouraged homosexuality and as I “experimented,” believing I’d found my natural “orientation” while I practiced various perversions. I presented myself as a very happy, confident, and free person, but in reality thought constantly of suicide.

To this day I do not know who started leaving Chick tracts in my “in-box” at work. At first I read them just for amusement but before long they forced me to question my beliefs. With the impetus from these tracts and some loving Christian friends, I became saved. I thank God every day for that anonymous tract donor who led me to Jesus before I got AIDS, and more importantly, before I died without salvation. It is embarrassing to talk about my past, but if I can save one person by showing them there is a way out of homosexual behavior, it will be well worth it.” —Peter A.

“For twenty-three years I was a Roman Catholic. I prayed to the Virgin Mary as a habit and went to confession regularly for the same reason. My life went downward as I got involved in drugs and spiritism. Physically and mentally I was getting worse by the day. I had thoughts of committing suicide at age of 23. Suddenly a young man gave me a tract called This Was Your Life. In the days that followed I gave my heart to Jesus Christ and I received His peace, joy and became partaker of a sure hope.” —Claude S.

millennia of sordid history is forgotten where pope after pope attempted to squelch God's preserved words and eliminate His true believers.

Second, these crowds represent a billion more people who look to the pope's "church" for eternal hope, when God's word says that it doesn't work that way.

Third, we need to ask, "Where was Jesus in all this?" One could say: "On the crucifix on the pope's staff." But that is not the glorious risen Lord, but a contorted image of His agony.

To this question, we would be told that He is the Eucharist, distributed to the crowd by 600 priests during the accompanying "Sacrifice of the Mass." But the Bible says

His death was a final sacrifice for our sins, no longer needing repeating in a "Mass."

Fourth, what is this business of dead saints? Didn't Paul call us all "saints" in his letters to the church? And none of them were dead, yet. Why the dead "saints?"

Well, it appears that Jesus needs a lot of help as our Advocate. Catholics are told they should pray to these dead ones for God's favors.

Proof of "sainthood" requires verification of miracles that happen when someone prays directly to that dead person. Generally, the process takes decades or even centuries to fully certify the person's merit. Two miracles are customarily required, but Pope Francis waived the requirement for Pope John XXIII and accepted just one to save time.

Rome's New Velvet Glove Make-Over

Now that Roman Catholicism is generally accepted by Evangelicals as just another "denomination," the sainthooding spectacle that virtually shut down the city of Rome on Sunday, April 27, needs careful examination.

The last hundred years have seen insidious changes in Romanism. Since Constantine (312 AD), its effort to dominate the "kings of the earth" (Rev. 17:2) has been constant. However, methods varied: Military conquest was once huge. Cornering eternal salvation was a central ploy. And control of the politically powerful through confession and education, worked wonders.

But, the 20th century saw a major shift in strategy. Complicity in two world wars failed to bring political power. So the sword was traded for a velvet glove. For 600 years, the Reformation had been Rome's arch-enemy. All attempts by sword, burning at the stake, and torture had failed. Another approach was desperately needed.

Keen to the opportunity of the developing mass media, Vatican strategists decided on a public remake of their harsh historical image. Something big and very public had to be staged.

Pivotal points in history were marked by 21 Councils. Most notable was the Council of Trent that thundered anathemas upon the Reformers and their Bibles. Others declared Mary as the "mother of God," infallibility of the pope, etc.

So, a new Ecumenical Council, popularly known as Vatican II, was planned. Convened by Pope John XXIII in 1962, it spanned the tenure of two popes and has been further implemented by each one since. Due to clever PR, it became a watershed event.

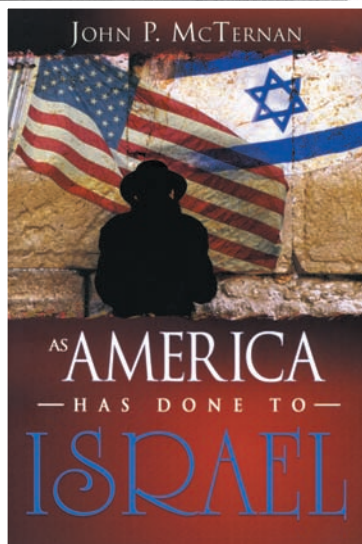

Former Councils had pushed ecumenism by force. This one was by smiles and lots of hugs. The word went out that Roman Catholics were truly "Christian." They

Shipment Was Late —Right On Time

Missionaries Mike and Luisa Carey are rejoicing in the Lord's timing, even when a delivery of Chick tracts to them in the Philippines was late.

But late was part of God's plan. When the shipment of tracts arrived, they planned to visit a local elementary school and hand some tracts to the students as they came and went from the school. Instead, a teacher saw them and asked what they were doing.

When she saw the tracts, she was immediately interested. She said that the state education department had declared a special reading day and the tracts would be perfect to use. She showed them to her principal, who contacted other area schools, opening the door for the Careys to supply tracts to schools in the whole district.

Today, the Careys have received 30,000 tracts in the local Cebuano language through the Chick Missions Fund and are widely seeding them into the elementary schools in the district. They have collected some of the comments from the teachers and students after reading the tracts:

- "San Agustin Elementary School pupils said that it made them cry and they were able to realize the importance of relationship between God and man. It also made them realize that nobody could help us but God alone. They were excited to have another story that could touch and change their lives."
- "The pupils were happy. They enjoyed reading the booklet. They got moral lessons from the story. In fact, the tract serves as supplementary reading material for lower grades especially [in the] mother tongue (Bisaya/Cebuano).
- "As I read it, my tears just fall down my cheeks and I do believe that God has [His] own purpose for every one of us."
- "I cried when I read the stories. Are there any others?"
- "It's like me," a father said when he read Gamay Nga Sapatos, (Tiny Shoes)

This report is just one of hundreds of stories of the effectiveness of Chick tracts on mission fields all over the world.

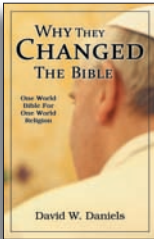

Missionaries have learned that they can seed a community with Chick tracts and often get enough response to the gospel to begin a local fellowship. Further seeding in a wider area continues to grow the church by teaching the members a simple way to share the gospel. crossroads of the modern Bible movement, influencing both popular English versions as well as how the Bible was translated for hundreds of people groups around the world. Then, when I examined the signposts at that crossroads, they pointed in some amazing directions.

Time is short. Satan's original plan was to burn all the Bibles, but that didn't work. So, a couple of hundred years ago he decided to just "fix" the Bible to his liking, instead. Now, his "fixed" Bibles have largely replaced the preserved words of God, both in English and otherwise. His trap is set and it is amazing who helped him set it and who has been caught in it.

friendly conversation turned cold when the subject of the conference was raised.

A third call was made to another C&MA pastor, unhappy with the conference at Ambrose. One of his church members had alerted him. Numerous other members were also ready to take a stand. Praise the Lord that some Evangelical churches still oppose ecumenism.

The Canadian C&MA and Ambrose University College illustrate how this ecumenism is infecting formerly bible-believing churches. Retiring pastors are replaced by graduates from ecumenical colleges, and the snowball from hell gains more churches. The ecumenical unity snowball can only lead to one result — a fatal meltdown in the pit of hell.

Submitted by a reader of BC illustrating the Evangelicals' march to join the coming one-world religion. It graphically illustrates the blatant disregard for biblical truth in the plunge toward "unity."

were just another “denomination” with a slightly different worship “tradition.” Unfortunately, their unbiblical “tradition” is exactly what the Reformers objected to: The tradition of bowing to idols (statues), primarily of their Virgin Mary goddess who basically replaced Jesus as mediator; the tradition of worship of their wafer god (Eucharist); the tradition of praying to “saints” for miracles; the tradition of paying for your own sins in purgatory; the tradition of no salvation outside subjection to the Pope and the “church.” And on it goes.

Once this unbiblical cult was redefined as just another “denomination,” the “Protestants” swallowed the bait. And that Another part of the ceremony included relics. As a point of contact with the dead saint, parts of his body, clothing, or items he touched are mounted in ornate boxes, called reliquaries, and displayed for “veneration” around the world. No Catholic altar is complete without some item from a “saint.”

Relics are categorized by the Vatican as “first class” (part of the saint’s body, such as bones or blood), “second-class” (items owned or used by saint) and “third-class” (things that were touched by the saint). Relics of John II includes his bloody shirt scavenged from the floor of the emergency room when he was shot by an assassin.

For John XXIII, it is bits of skin removed from his cadaver, previously exhumed for his sainthood ceremonies.

Soul winners, the end-time pieces are rapidly falling into place. Prayers to dead saints and relics is idolatry, condemned in scripture. We must get the true gospel out while we can.

bait is labeled, “inter-denominational,” or “inter-confessional.” Under the banner of Jesus’ prayer in John 17:21, “that they all may be one...,” RC priests cozied up to televangelists and were given a spot on “Christian” broadcasting networks. Congregations began to share pulpits. Local councils of churches welcomed neighborhood priests.*

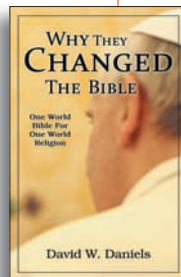

And what was the result for the kingdom of God? No more witnessing to Roman Catholics. At the beginning of the 20th century, Rome was correctly labeled a “cult,” with a false gospel. Bible believers knew Catholics were lost because they were trusting on the pagan rituals of their “church,” instead of Christ’s finished work on the cross for salvation.

In addition to the drive for “unity,” Rome decided to “fix” the Bible. For generations, the hated Bible for the common man, the King James Version, had spread the truth about popish paganism throughout the West.

In danger were Catholic strongholds in Latin America, Eastern Europe and Pacific Islands, trapped in Rome’s false gospel. They knew that any bibles translated from the KJV-based manuscripts would stoke revival fires and expose Rome’s false gospel. It’s another story how they have succeeded in side-lining the preserved Bible, replacing it with bibles that water down scriptures that counter Catholic teachings.

David W. Daniels’ new book, Why They Changed the Bible, details the Jesuit guidance of one pivotal man that created doubt in God’s ability to preserve His Words. Now, over a billion people are trusting the pope’s false gospel which leads to hell —and “evangelicals” no longer witness to them, believing they are already saved. Soul winners, we need to tell them to obey Rev. 18:4 and “come out...”

A MESSAGE FROM JACK CHICK...

Dear ones in Christ:

Four teenage girls from my neighborhood rang our doorbell late one afternoon on Halloween. I gave each of them a copy of Happy Hour to see their reaction. They all read their copy on my front porch, and each of the four girls said almost in unison, "That's my dad!"

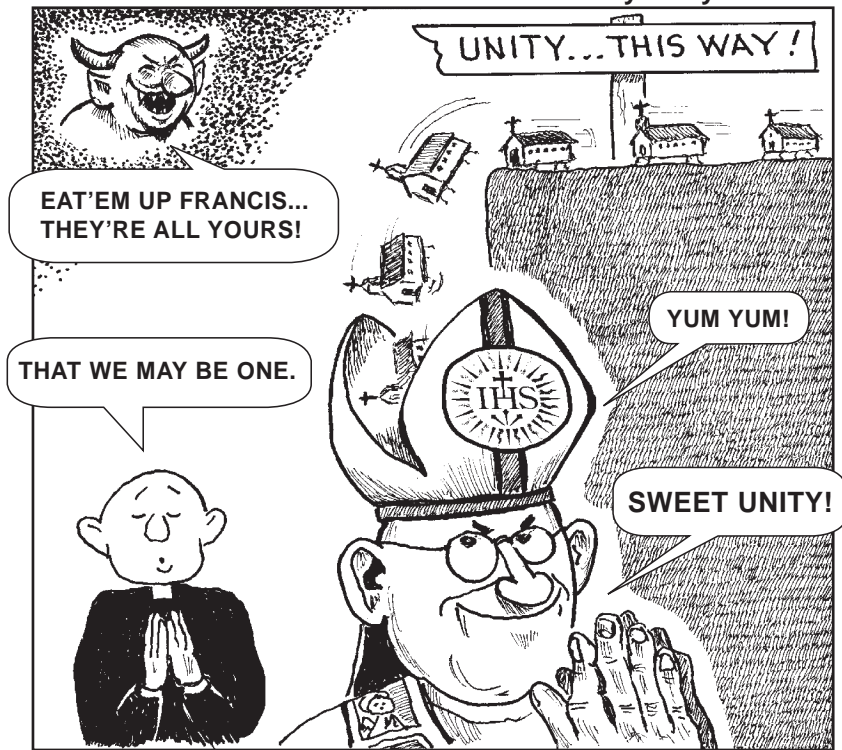

I was stunned. How many alcoholics could there be? Since then, when I go to the supermarket, I often see little old ladies pushing their grocery carts with bottles of gin and not much else. Can it be that booze is destroying more souls than we ever dreamed? How come we never hear about it in our pulpits? Maybe it's politically incorrect.

Did you ever hear about Billy Sunday? At the turn of the 20th century he was one of our greatest evangelists, a man on fire for the Lord. He didn't care if he was politically incorrect. He hit liquor with both feet. Besides winning a million souls to Christ, he was one of the reasons prohibition came to drunken America. It was a revival.

After reading Billy Sunday's sermons on liquor, the Lord gave us a new tract called Just One More. If you know friends, neighbors, or relatives who occasionally enjoy a sip of the devil's brew, give them a copy of Happy Hour, The Bully, or Just One More. Remember, beloved, there'll be no drunkards in heaven! Let's reach them for Christ before sclerosis of the liver takes them down into the pit. Be brave!

Your brother in Christ,

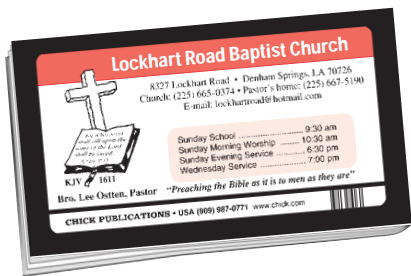

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers...
